Up to Seven Doctoral Fellowships in Economic Sociology and Political Economy

The International Max Planck Research School on the Social and Political Constitution of the Economy (IMPRS-SPCE), conducted jointly by the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies and the University of Cologne, invites excellent candidates to apply for its doctoral program.

The graduate school features a unique curriculum of core courses, research methods, electives, and summer school sessions. Doctoral researchers take part in the intellectual life of the Institute and the University and can spend time at partner institutions abroad. The working language at the Research School is English. A command of German is useful but not required.

Candidates with a master’s degree (120 ECTS) or equivalent qualification in political science, sociology, organization studies, history, or related fields are welcome to apply. They must hold their degree before the fellowship begins and are expected to have a strong interest in pursuing an academic career. Fellowships will start on October 1, 2015. They will be awarded for 15 months with an option for an additional 27 months. Fellows will receive a monthly stipend of 1,468 euros. The deadline for application is February 28, 2015. For program details and an online application form, please consult http://imprs.mpifg.de.

Doctoral degrees are usually awarded by the University of Cologne. Arrangements with other universities in Germany and abroad are possible in individual cases. Students at the IMPRS-SPCE may also acquire a French doctorate by entering a joint doctoral program with Sciences Po in Paris (cotutelle).

The Max Planck Society and the University of Cologne are equal opportunity employers. They are committed to improving the opportunities for women in science.
